Proposal Title: INSS Minor and Undergraduate Certificate Curriculum Changes

The Intelligence and National Security Studies (INSS) program is proposing significant catalog changes to its minor and undergraduate curriculum to ease a burdensome registration process and allow more choice in upper division electives for the minor.

1. The INSS program is proposing to add relevant upper division prescribed elective courses to its minor. These courses already exist as part of the Bachelor of Arts in Security Studies (BASS) which, like the INSS minor, is part of the Department of Criminal Justice. The courses to be added from the BASS curriculum are: INSS 3349 Security Operations; INSS 4302 Intelligence and Transnational Threat; INSS 4303 Ethics and Security; INSS 4347 Critical Infrastructure Protection; INSS 4380 Cybersecurity.
2. The program is also requesting the deletion of 4 lower-division courses that are not offered any longer. Three of these classes are part of the INSS Undergraduate Certificate program. This certificate program not only has very low enrollment, but there are so many other choices at an upper-division level, that there is no need to offer the lower division courses. We propose to delete INSS 1340 Introduction to Homeland Security; INSS 1345 Intel Analysis & Security Management, INSS 1348 Transportation and Border Security; and INSS 2350 Selected Problems in Intelligence. INSS 2350 was replaced by INSS 4350 Selected Problems in Intelligence (of the exact same title). The 3 lower-division courses we wish to delete have not been offered in many years and there are no plans to offer them in the future.
3. Currently, any student who wishes to enroll in all INSS courses must call the department for permission to enroll, and the department must lift the hold on that individual student's account. INSS students come from majors across the College of Liberal Arts, so there is no need to have this registration hold, especially when minors are not required to get advised. There are nearly 200 INSS minors, and lifting holds is an extremely burdensome process for the department and unnecessary step for students to register, especially when financial aid requires that a student declare a minor before they will cover the class. The faculty proposes the removal of the department approval registration restriction to all INSS courses. This will also help facilitate student enrollment especially for courses that are also listed as part of the Liberal Arts Block electives. These course change forms are attached for the INSS program.

4. The INSS program is also requesting approval to remove the prerequisite restriction of INSS 3302 Seminar in Intelligence and National Security from the following courses: INSS 3310 Intel and Counterterrorism; INSS 3315 Intel and Counterproliferation; INSS 3320 Counterintelligence and Security; INSS 4302 Intel and Transnational Threats. INSS 3302 is a seminar course and does not provide any necessary skills or knowledge to be successful in the courses listed above; therefore the prerequisite is not needed.
5. The INSS program is also requesting approval to remove the prerequisite restriction of INSS 3340 from an elective class called: INSS 4347 Critical Infrastructure Protection. INSS 3340 is a seminar in homeland security course and does not provide any necessary skills or knowledge to be successful in INSS 4347; therefore the prerequisite is not needed.
6. The INSS program is also requesting approval to remove the prerequisite restriction of INSS 3348 Cyberspace and National Security from INSS 4380 Cybersecurity. INSS 4380 is an elective for INSS students that has INSS 3348 as a prerequisite. INSS 4380 is a course that covers the basic understanding of how to protect information systems with a focus on focusing on computing, networking and internetworking. INSS 3348 is a very different course focusing on Russian and Chinese cyber warfare and national military strategies. Therefore the prerequisite is not applicable and not needed.
7. INSS would like to request removal of the classification restriction from INSS 3343 Crime and Border Security and INSS 4309 Technical Intelligence as the other INSS courses do not have this restriction and all are considered upper division electives.
8. INSS 4366 Security Studies Internship. In the Department of Criminal Justice, all internships requires an application to the department, acceptance by a sponsoring agency, and an interview and approval from our internship director. This process takes an entire semester prior to the student's registration of the class. The Department of CJ requires approval with its other internships, so a departmental approval is being requested to ADD in to INSS 4366 Security Studies Internship to make this consistent with existing departmental practice. A prerequisite of INSS 3302 with a "C" or better is also requested to encourage students to complete at least one of their program requirements prior to completing an internship.
9. Changes to INSS Undergraduate Certificate: An undergraduate certificate was approved years ago for students majoring in Bachelor's of Multidisciplinary Studies, but the wording in the catalog allows any UTEP student to apply for this certificate, regardless of major or minor. The faculty are proposing wording that specifies eligibility to students majoring in the Bachelor of Multidisciplinary Studies. We are also proposing that the 6 hours of INSS electives be at the upper division only (3000 and 4000). This leaves 17 class choices, for which the student selects only two classes. Seventeen is an ample number of choices without having any of the lower division courses listed-- 4 lower division courses are slated for deletion (in point #2 above) and the other 6 lower division courses are offered exclusively online to Connect students in the Bachelor of Arts in Security Studies (BASS) program.

This minor program is designed to allow students to become familiar with intelligence and security needs and problems of risk confronted by private and governmental organizations. Students will be introduced to problems and reasoning concerning matters of security, counterintelligence, transnational threats such as terrorism and drug cartels, diplomacy, international transactions, intelligence bureaucracies, and related areas. The program is valuable for students interested in understanding the complex world of security, intelligence, and counterintelligence and for students seeking careers in the U.S. Intelligence Community and private agencies employing security technology, methodology, and services. The minor program is highly flexible and will benefit students from any college or major at UTEP. Students are required to complete six hours of required courses, six hours of prescribed electives in the intelligence and national security studies (INSS) curriculum, and six hours from a list of interdisciplinary electives. Any UTEP undergraduate student in good academic standing is eligible for enrollment in the Minor in Intelligence and National Security Studies.
