George Frideric Handel (1685–1759) was one of the most famous composers of the late Baroque era. He was originally from Germany, where he received his musical training, but he relocated to London in 1712 to pursue his career as a composer for the English nobility. He is most well known for his 42 operas, 29 oratorios, and over 120 works for various ensembles (duets, trios, cantatas, organ concerti, solo song, etc.).

“See the raging flames arise” is from his 20th oratorio, Joshua, which tells the Biblical story of the passage of the Israelites (led by Joshua) over the Jordan River into Canaan and through the Battle of Jericho. This aria is sung by Caleb, representative of the Tribe of Judah, and tells of the battle and the subsequent destruction of the city of Jericho.

The walls are levell’d...See the raging flames arise

The walls are levell’d, pour the chosen bands,
With hostile gore imbrue your thirsty hands,
Set palaces and temples in a blaze,
Sap the foundations, and the bulwarks raze.
But oh, remember, in the bloody strife,
To spare the hospitable Rahab’s life.
See, the raging flames arise,
Hear, the dismal groans and cries!
The fatal day of wrath is come,
Proud Jericho hath met her doom.

Franz Schubert (1797–1828) was an Austrian composer who lived during the late Classical/early Romantic period and is one of the most popular and often-performed composers of that era. His contribution to classical music was enormous, producing seven full symphonies, a multitude of sacred music, 17 operas, a wealth of incidental music, a sizable collection of chamber and piano music, and over 600 secular vocal works (most of which are Lieder, of which he is credited as the inventor) in just 32 years of life. Schwanengesang is a collection of 14 songs which Schubert composed near the end of his life and which were gathered and published posthumously.

“Ständchen”, the fourth song of the cycle, is a serenade to the lover of the narrator, beckoning them to return to the narrator after being separated from each other.

Ständchen
Leise flehen meine Lieder
Durch die Nacht zu dir;
In den Stillen Hain hernieder,
Liebchen, komm’ zu mir!
Flüsternd schlanke Wipfel rauschen
In des Mondes Licht;
Des Verräters feindlich lauschen
Fürschte, Holde, night!
Hörst die Nachtigallen schlagen?
Ach! sie flehen dich,
Mit der Töne süßen Klagen
Flehen sie für mich.
Sie verstehn des Busens Sehnen,
Kennen Liebesschmerz,
Rühren mit den Silbertönen
Jedes weiche Herz.
Lass auch dir die Brust bewegen,
Liebchen, höre mich!
Bebend harr’ ich dir entgegen!
Komm, beglücke mich!

Serenade
Softly plead my songs
Through the night to you;
Into the quiet grove down here,
Darling, come to me!
Whispering slim treetops rustle
In the moon’s light;
The traitor’s inimical listening -
Fear not, my beloved!
Do you hear the nightingales sing?
Ah, they plead to you;
With the tones’ sweet complaining
They plead for me.
They understand the bosom’s longing,
They know love’s pain,
They move with the silver tones of
Every soft heart.
Let also your heart be moved;
Darling, hear me!
I wait for you, trembling, in anticipation!
Come, delight me!

Richard Strauss (1864–1949) was a prominent German composer during the late Romantic and early modern time periods. He is best known for his operas (including Der Rosenkavalier, Elektra, and Salome), his Lieder, his tone poems, and his instrumental works. Strauss began studying and composing music from the incredible age of six years old and produced Lieder (art songs) his whole life.

“Allerseelen” is one of those Lieder and is a beautiful, lush setting of the poem by Austrian poet Hermann von Gilm and reflects the narrator’s wish to rekindle passion with a lover who has long since departed this world on All Soul’s Day, the day dedicated to remembering deceased loved ones and honoring their lives.

Allerseelen
Stell’ auf den Tisch die duftenden Reseden,
Die letzten roten Astern trag’ herbei,
Und lass uns wieder von der Liebe reden,
Wie einst im Mai.

All Soul’s Day
Put on the table the fragrant mignonettes,
Carry to here to last red asters,
And let us speak again of love
Like once in May.
