

Faculty Development & Training

Research and Innovation is dedicated to providing faculty development and training opportunities to support your research endeavors, including workshops, professional coaching, and tailored support for early career professionals.

Faculty Development & Training

STAR @ UTEP Program

Facilitated by the NRMN-STAR Coaching Group, the STAR @ UTEP program aims to enhance research success by providing faculty with intensive grant-writing training and professional development. Through group-based and individual coaching, participants will be guided toward preparing strong proposals for submission. The program also offers opportunities to interact with content experts and program officers relevant to participants' research fields.

Professional Development & Individualized Coaching Programs

To further support your research endeavors, R&I aims to bring in professional coaches and research development leaders to host grant writing and other professional development workshops. In 2025, we will host Lucy Deckard, president of Academic Research Funding Strategies, LLC to host a series of workshops.

Early Career Program

R&I is dedicated to supporting faculty members early in their careers with applying for early career grants, such as the NSF CAREER award. Tailored programming include networking, workshops, proposal support, and professional panels.
