Electrical Structures Conference 2025

The Electronic Structure Workshop series was originated by David M. Ceperley and Richard M. Martin at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in 1989. It has been led by Andrew M. Rappe at the University of Pennsylvania since 2015. This workshop covers the development and application of theoretical and computational electronic structure methods for the study of molecules, liquids, and solids. The workshop brings together researchers and practitioners of electronic structure theory from universities, colleges, institutes, and laboratories in the U.S. and abroad. Graduate students, postdoctoral researchers, research scientists, and academic faculty are especially encouraged to attend.
